Chad La Pointe started his journey in construction early in life with a passion for industrial arts. Learning the art of fabrication using different mediums and methods was something that Chad looked forward to every day and, as a result, he excelled. His career was really propelled forward in 1999 when Chad was asked to assist in building a remote lakeside retreat in Saskatchewan. The experience taught him how to leverage the building process with limited human and building resources; this was the cornerstone of launching his career in residential construction and the spark behind what he refers to as the Nikari Process.

The Nikari Process is the ultimate building experience which ensures your wishes and needs are met throughout construction, from foundation to the finishing touches. Chad's and his team's intuitive style of communication leaves clients feeling that they are truly heard throughout the process. Every step of the process is executed with the smallest details in mind, which Chad believes makes the biggest difference in the final product. Their process enables you to create a world where breathtaking beauty and exceptional craftsmanship converge. Discover the unrivaled beauty and timeless elegance that await you with Nikari Homes.
